The Next 50: A G^oD^oRT for All

Kian Flynn

I have been thinking a lot about the future of our profession in the last few years. The challenges we face are many, and the solutions are not always obvious. However, I believe that the key to our success in the next 50 years lies in our ability to embrace change and innovation. We must be willing to learn from our mistakes and to adapt to the ever-changing landscape of our industry. This is not an easy task, but it is one that we must undertake if we are to remain relevant and successful. The future is uncertain, but I am optimistic about the potential of our profession. We have the talent and the resources to overcome any challenge that we may face. We must only have the courage to take the first step.
